Ontario Science Centre Toronto

AUGUST 15, 2024

TOUR OVERVIEW

Established in 1969, the Ontario Science Centre (770 Don Mills Rd.) has been engaging visitors with innovative science and technology experiences for 50 years. Upon opening its doors, the Ontario Science Centre was a pioneer in its hands-on approach to science. Unlike traditional museums at the time, where exhibits were strictly for viewing only, the Ontario Science Centre promoted interaction and live demonstrations. The Science Centre even has its own amateur radio station since its opening in 1969 and incorporated its very first—and Ontario's one and only—IMAX Dome theatre in 1996. The Ontario Science Centre is designed in a Brutalist style popular in the 1960s and is composed of three main buildings that are interlinked with a series of bridges and escalators. The complex also traces and descends into the contours of the Don River Ravine.
